

Play People are Ralph, Clint, Nancy and Keith. They were formed in a dark German factory in the spring of 2008. Clint's the lead singer and plays some guitar, Keith's on drums, Nancy and Ralph share the rest between themselves, depending on what they fancy doing. Maracas or Rickenbacker? What do you fancy? They live in middle England, deciding the dark German factory was too dark and they settled for cold and rain. They don't go out much but there's not much outside, anyway. In September 2008, they released their debut single, "oh what a life..." on This Almighty Pop. They teamed up with Cloudberry Records and the track "Meet Me Saturday" was released on the ep "ever get the feeling you've been cheated?" "Goes Out" is the new single released on Cloudberry records, and this popkids, comes out on 7" vinyl.

The first song I hear is a gorgeous 60s tinged pop song. It's called 'Goes Out' and it's one of the most infectious songs that I have heard in a while.

INDIE-MP3

Infectious? Check. Dance-y? Check. Infectiously dance-y? I think so. Awesome keys, awesome guitar, awesome drums, and fucking handclaps and "la-la-"s, make for some pretty awesome pop music.
